

Post employment restrictions pertaining to members of the legislature

The Public Employees Reform Act of 2007 did not change the post employment restrictions which apply to members of the legislature. Members are prohibited from promoting or opposing the passage of legislation in either house of the legislature for compensation for two years after they terminate their legislative service.